Safeguard Chooses Honeywell as its Partner of Choice

With changes in communications technology impacting the security industry, John Jennings, CEO of Safeguard Security & Communications, was determined to stay ahead of the curve. He decided that Safeguard would standardize on Honeywell GSM technology for every residential and commercial installation. Safeguard, one of the largest full-service security companies in the Southwest United States, has seen a lot of change in its nearly 50 years in the business. Now, with Honeywell's GSM solution, Jennings is confident that his company is ready for the new generation of buyers who demand the latest technology, and for those who choose VoIP or cell phones as their only method of communication. It's a choice that is increasing the value of his accounts and enhancing his profitability.
