Get Wired

Honeywell can create an infrastructure that allows you to interconnect your computers and gaming devices throughout the home, multiplying their effectiveness. And by networking printers, scanners, and sharing files across a home network, you can reduce the number of devices you need to purchase while giving everyone in the home access to the whole system. Play games, share printers, MP3 music files and surf the 'Net simultaneously.

Connectivity

The need for continuous ultra-high-speed Internet service is a reality today. Honeywell allows simultaneous online access in multiple locations—with a single connection. One parent can check the movie times in one end of the house while the other downloads a recipe and a child does research for a school paper. No more having to take turns or argue about time on the Internet!

Productivity

With telecommuting and home businesses on the rise, the ability to integrate work needs into your home life is essential. With structured wiring, any room in your house can become a hassle-free home office. Easily manage e-mail, multi-line phones, faxes, file transfers and video conferencing from any room in the comfort of your home or even in the backyard by the pool.

Protected...and connected.

Honeywell lets you keep an eye on your children's Internet activity with parental controls on select computers while an integrated firewall guards against hackers, keeping your system safe and trouble-free. Your kids can play interactive games, download music, stay in touch with friends and access the wonderful range of educational opportunities available on the Internet while you have peace of mind.
